Introduction

This is a new, updated edition of the Cambridge Learner's Dictionary, designed for students and users of English throughout the world.

It has been written by a team of dictionary writers with a strong background in English language teaching, who really understand the needs of learners and the best way to explain what words mean and how they are used.

While writing this dictionary, we have spoken to hundreds of teachers and students in many different countries, asking them what they need, what they would like, and how they would like it presented. This has helped us to develop a style which is easy to understand while giving enough detail to help students understand and use English with confidence.

One way that teachers and students helped us was in choosing the words we used in our explanations. We already used a strictly controlled list of meanings, but as a result of our research we cut out even more words, so now we can be sure that we only use words that students are really likely to know.

This dictionary was written using the Cambridge International Corpus, a computerized collection of over 600 million words from a huge range of sources, both written and spoken, British and American. Our aim has been to include as many words and phrases as possible, while keeping a clear and attractive page. The corpus helps us to decide which are the most important words and meanings, and to find the most common patterns in which they are used. This means we do not waste space on rare words that students are less likely to need. The corpus also helps us find natural and typical examples to show how words and phrases are used.

Another extremely valuable tool we have is the Cambridge Learner Corpus, several million words written by learners of English. This corpus shows which words cause the greatest problems for learners. We used it to help us to decide which words should have usage notes and which subjects to cover in our Study Section in the centre of the book. In other words, the information we show is there to deal with real problems met by real learners.

The Cambridge Learner's Dictionary is available with or without a CD-ROM which contains everything that is in the dictionary as well as some great extra features such as spoken pronunciations in British and American accents, and a unique thesaurus search feature so that you can search for words by meaning.

We hope you enjoy using the Cambridge Learner's Dictionary. If you have any comments about it, we would like to hear from you. Our dictionaries are all available for you to search online on our website:

How to use this dictionary

Each word has a part of speech label (e.g. noun, verb, adj). For a list of the parts of speech, see inside the front cover.

Where a word has more than one meaning, the most common meaning is shown first.

Each entry begins with the base form of the word in blue.

charity /'tʃærɪti/ noun 1 ORGANIZATION [C, U] an official organization that gives money, food, or help to people who need it The raffle will raise money for charity. • A percentage of the company's profits go to charity. 2 MONEY/HELP [U] money, food, or other help that is given to people I won't accept charity. 3 KINDNESS [U] kindness towards other people an act of charity

'charity ˌshop UK (US thrift shop) noun [C] a shop which sells goods given by the public, especially clothes, to make money for a particular charity

Words which have several meanings have GUIDEWORDS to help you find the meaning you are looking for.

Some words (compounds) are made of two or more separate words. They are found in alphabetical order, ignoring the spaces between words. The stress pattern (= which part of the word you should emphasize when you say it) is shown on the word.

When two words have the same spelling but different parts of speech (e.g. a noun and a verb) they have separate entries.

promise[1] /'prɒmɪs/ verb 1 [I, T] to say that you will certainly do something or that something will certainly happen [+ to do sth] She promised to write to me every week. • [+ (that)] Paul promised me that he'd cook dinner tonight. 2 [+ two objects] to say that you will certainly give something to someone They promised us a reward. • Grandma's ring was promised to me. 3 promise to be sth If something promises to be good, exciting, etc, people expect that it will be good, exciting, etc. It promises to be a really exciting game.

Grammar labels tell you how a word is used. There is an explanation of all the grammar codes on page 8.

COMMON LEARNER ERROR

promise

When you use the expression promise someone something, no preposition is needed after the verb.

He promised his mum that he would clean his room.

~~He promised to his mum that he would clean his room.~~

Common Learner Error notes based on the Cambridge Learner Corpus give extra information about words which often cause problems for learners.

This symbol shows very common words which are important to learn.

promise[2] /'prɒmɪs/ noun 1 [C] when you say that you will certainly do something I'm not sure I can do it so I won't make any promises. 2 keep/break a promise to do/not do what you said that you would do 3 show promise If someone or something shows promise, they are likely to be successful. As a child, he showed great promise as an athlete.

Some words are used as part of a phrase. This is shown clearly at the start of the buy[1] /baɪ/ verb [T] past bought to get something by paying money for it I went to the shop to buy some milk. • They bought their house for £14,000. • [+ two objects] He bought me a camera for my birthday.

buy sb/sth out to buy part of a company or building from someone else so that you own all of it He bought out his partner for £3 million.
buy sth up to quickly buy a lot of something, often all that is available Most of the land in the area has been bought up by property developers.
buy[2] /baɪ/ noun a good buy when you buy something good for a cheap price This coat was a really good buy.
buyer /'baɪəʳ/ noun [C] someone who buys something buyout /'baɪaʊt/ noun [C] when a group of people buy the company that they work for Phrasal verbs come after the entry for the verb. If there is more than one, they are in alphabetical order. There is a Study Page on phrasal verbs on page centre 34.

Words which are often used together (collocations) are shown in dark type in examples

Example sentences, based on the Cambridge International Corpus, show how words are used in typical situations.

Pronunciations use the International Phonetic Alphabet. There is a list of these symbols inside the back cover of the dictionary. The most difficult symbols are also explained at the bottom of each page. There is an explanation of the pronunciation system on page 1 ice[1] /aɪs/ noun [U] 1 water that has frozen and become solid Gerry slipped on the ice and broke his arm. • I've put a couple of bottles of champagne on ice (= in a bucket of ice to get cold).

2 break the ice to make people who have not met before feel relaxed with each other, often by starting a conversation ice[2] /aɪs/ (also US frost) verb [T] to cover a cake with icing (= sweet mixture used to cover cakes) an iced bun iceberg /'aɪsbɜːg/ noun [C] a very large piece of ice that floats in the sea ➲ See also: be the tip[1] of the iceberg.

Some words are used as part of an idiom. These are shown at the end of the entry. There is a Study Page on idioms on page centre 26.

All our explanations use very simple words. Where we have had to use a more difficult word than usual, that word is explained in brackets.

Cross references show you where you can find related information such as opposites, pictures, study pages, and idioms.

These labels show you when a word is used in British English or American English. There is an explanation of these labels on page 10.

When a word can be spelled another way, or when there is another word for it, this is shown.

skive /skaɪv/ (also skive off) verb [I, T] UK to not go to school or work when you should, or to leave school or work earlier than you should
• skiver noun [C] UK informal someone who skives

Some words which are formed from the main word are shown at the end of an entry. If a word is not formed with a regular pattern, or if its meaning is not easy to guess, it has its own explanation. There is a section on Word Beginnings and Endings on page 751.

These labels tell you how formal, informal, etc a word is. There is an explanation of all these labels on page 10.

often passive	verb often used in the passive	allow ► Smoking is not allowed in the restaurant.
often reflexive	verb often used with a reflexive pronoun (myself, yourself, herself, etc)	defend ► He can defend himself.

If a verb or a meaning of a verb is always passive (e.g. inundate, demote, affiliate) or always reflexive (e.g. brace, ingratiate, steel), the whole grammar pattern is shown at the beginning of the entry.

Some verb or meanings of verbs are always followed by an adverb or preposition (e.g. creep, flick, trickle). When this happens, common examples of adverbs and prepositions used are shown at the beginning of the entry or the meaning.

➲ see also Study Page Verb patterns, on p. centre 42

Adjectives

always before noun	attributive adjective, always comes before the noun	major, basic, staunch never before noun	predicative adjective, used with verbs such as be, seem, feel	afraid, ready, done ► She's afraid of water.
always after noun	adjective always used directly after the noun	galore, proper, incarnate ► The devil incarnate.

Other grammar patterns

The following patterns can refer to nouns, adjectives, and verbs:

+ that	the word is followed by a that clause, and the word that must be included	boast, assertion, evident ► It was evident from her voice that she was upset.
+ (that)	the word is followed by a that clause but the word that does not have to be used	hope, amazed, doubt ► I hope that the bus won't be late. I hope the bus won't be late.
+ doing sth	the word is followed by a verb in the –ing form	enjoy, busy, difficulty ► I enjoy going to the beach.
+ to do sth	the word is followed by a verb in the infinitive	confidence, careful, decide ► I didn't have the confidence to speak up.
+ for/of, etc + doing sth	the word is followed by a preposition (e.g. for/of) and then a verb in the –ing form	apologize, idea, guilty ► She apologized for being late.
+ question word	the word is followed by a question word (e.g. who, what, how)	ask, certain, clue ► I'm not certain who to ask.
used in questions and negatives	the word is used in questions and negative sentences	mind, much, yet ► Do you mind if I come in? I haven't seen him yet.

humorous	used in order to be funny or to make a joke	couch potato, snail mail literary	used in books and poems, not in ordinary conversation	beloved, slumber, weep
old-fashioned	not used in modern English – you might find these words in books, used by older people, or used in order to be funny	gramophone, spectacles, farewell
trademark	the name of a product that is made by one company, but which has become used as a general word	Coke, Hoover, Sellotape

UK/US labels

The spelling used in definitions and examples in this dictionary is British English. However, American English is also explained clearly, and where there is a difference between British and American English, this is shown.

UK	only used in British English	pavement, petrol station
US	only used in American English	sidewalk, gas station mainly UK	mainly used in British English, but sometimes in American English	lecturer, rubbish, nightdress mainly US	mainly used in American English, but sometimes in British English	movie, apartment, semester
also UK	another word that can also be used in British English	truck (also UK lorry) truck is used in Britain and America lorry is also used in Britain also US another word that can also be used in American English railway (also US railroad)

- railway is used in Britain and America
- railroad is also used in America

➲ see also Study Page UK and US English, on p. centre 41

Pronunciation

All pronunciations use the International Phonetic Alphabet. There is a complete list of phonetic symbols inside the back cover.

Many phonetic symbols, e.g. /p/, /s/, /k/, sound exactly like the most common pronunciation of the letter they look like. Those that do not are explained at the bottom of every page of the dictionary.

Where more than one pronunciation is shown, the more common one is first, but both are often used.

British and American pronunciation

Most words are given only one pronunciation, which is acceptable in British and American English. There are some regular differences between British and American English which are not shown for every word.

The main ones are:

1 In American English, the r in words such as hard or teacher is pronounced, and in British English it is silent.

2 In American English, t and tt in words such as later and butter, are pronounced in a soft way, almost like a /d/ sound.

Where there is a big difference between British and American pronunciation, both forms are shown. The symbol (US) is shown before an American pronunciation, e.g. schedule /'ʃedju:l (US) 'skedʒu:l/

Stress patterns

Stress patterns show you which parts of the word you should emphasize when you say them.

/'/ shows the main emphasis on a word. For example, in the word picture /'pɪktʃəʳ/, you should emphasize the first part, and in the word deny /dɪ'naɪ/ you should emphasize the second part.

/ˌ/ shows the second most important emphasis on the word. For example, in the word submarine /ˌsʌbmə'i:n/, the main emphasis is on the last part of the word, but you should also emphasize the first part of the word slightly.

Compound words (words made of two or more separate words) have their stress patterns shown on them. For example in the word cass'ette re,corder, the main emphasis is on the second part of the first word, but you should also emphasize the second part of the second word slightly.

Strong forms and weak forms

Some common words (e.g. and, them, of) have strong forms and weak forms. The weak forms are more common.

For example, in the sentence 'I saw them leave.', the weak form /ðəm/ would be used.

The strong form is used when you want to emphasize the word. For instance, in the sentence 'They said they saw me, but I didn't see them.', the strong form /ðem/ would be used.

Regular inflections

All inflections (e.g. plurals, past tenses) that are not regular (= are not formed in the usual way) are shown at the entry for the word. The regular way of forming inflections is shown below.

Nouns

Most nouns form their plurals by adding –s ► chair, chairs ► plate, plates

Nouns which end in –s, –ss, –ch, –x, and –z, make their plurals by adding –es ► mass, masses ► match, matches

Nouns which end in a consonant (e.g. m, t, p) + –y, form their plurals by taking away the –y and adding –ies
► baby, babies ► university, universities

Adjectives

see also Study Page Adjectives, on p. centre 18

The comparative form of adjectives is used to show that someone or something has more of a particular quality than someone or something else. To make the regular comparative form, you either add –er to the end of the adjective, or use the word more before it.

The superlative form of adjectives is used to show that someone or something has more of a particular quality than anyone or anything else. To make the regular superlative form, you either add –est to the end of the adjective, or use the word most before it.

One-syllable adjectives usually form their comparative and superlative with –er and –est ► small, smaller, smallest

Two-syllable adjectives can all form their comparative and superlative with more and most.
► complex, more complex, most complex

Some two-syllable adjectives can use –er and –est too. The most common of these are:
- adjectives ending in –y and –ow, ► happy, noisy, shallow
- adjectives ending in –le, ► able, noble, simple
- some other common two-syllable adjectives, ► common, cruel, handsome, pleasant, polite, quiet, solid, wicked

Three-syllable adjectives usually form their comparative and superlative with more and most ► beautiful, more beautiful, most beautiful

When you are using the –er, –est forms, if the adjective ends in –e, take away the –e before adding the ending ► pale, paler, palest

If the adjective ends in –y, change this to –i before adding the ending ► happy, happier, happiest

Verbs

Regular verbs add the following endings:

for the 3rd person singular add –s, or –es to verbs that end in –s, –ss, –ch, –x, and –z

for the present participle add –ing for the past tense and the past participle add –ed ► pack, packs, packing, packed

For verbs ending in –e, take away the –e before adding the present participle, past tense, and past participle endings.
► hate, hates, hating, hated

For verbs ending in –y, for the third person singular take away the –y and add –ies, and for the past tense and past participle take away the –y and add –ied.
► cry, cries, crying, cried

A, a /eɪ/ the first letter of the alphabet

a (also an) strong form /eɪ/ weak form /ə/ determiner 1 BEFORE NOUN used before a noun to refer to a single thing or person but not a particular thing or person or not one that you have referred to before I need a new car. ○ I bought a nice coat yesterday. ○ I saw a woman speaking to him. 2 ONE one a hundred dollars ○ a dozen eggs 3 EVERY/EACH every or each A child needs love. ○ Take one tablet three times a (= each) day. 4 TYPE used to say what type of thing or person something or someone is It's a guinea-pig. ○ She's a doctor. 5 AN ACTION used before some action nouns when referring to one example of the action I'm just going to have a wash. ○ Take a look at this. 6 TWO NOUNS used before the first of two nouns that are often used together a cup and saucer 7 AMOUNTS used before some phrases saying how much of something there is a few days ○ a bit of sugar 8 NAME used before a person's name when referring to someone you do not know There's a Ms Leeming to see you.
